CATCH A PIECE OF HISTORY ON SYDNEY MONORAIL FOR IT'S LAST EVER SCHOOL HOLIDAY ROUNDS

Families and friends are invited to come and check out the many fun activities while riding on the Sydney Monorail's last ever school holidays journey.

After 25 years of service as an iconic landmark and Darling Harbour attraction, Sydney Monorail will close forever on 30 June 2013. People travelling on the Monorail can make their own special memories as they take a ride on the last April school holiday rounds.

From the excitement of Paddy's Markets and Chinatown (Paddy's Markets station) to the Luminous interactive light show at Darling Quarter playground (Convention station), the stunning views from Sydney Tower Eye (City Centre station) or The Australian Museum's Alexander the Great: 2000 Years of Treasures exhibition (Galleries Victoria station), the Monorail is the perfect way to get about the city these school holidays.

Families can go crackers with hands-on contraptions at Wallace & Gromit's World of Invention exhibition at the Powerhouse Museum (Paddy's Markets station) or spend the day discovering all things nautical at the National Maritime Museum (Harbourside station) – there is no end to the activities to be enjoyed along the Monorail route these holidays.
